I sit most of my evenings in my room and the sky looks beautiful and with the aid of an almanac I study the stars. I have watched the wonderful planet Jupiter since Sept. It will be evening star until sometime in Apr. If you haven't seen it just take a look any bright night, it is a little west of the moon. it is the most wonderful of them all a blue and gold, and very brilliant. Not far away is the Mars which is populated like the earth and is more than three times its size. I think the stars make a wonderful study. — Rev. Sanborn, the new minister at the Emanuel called to see me this afternoon the first I have met him. Has a very pleasant appearance but can't tell what he thinks of me. I think I have said it all and will close, love.

Oh! I want to thank you for the lovely Valentine, it was fine.
